Would like in English A1: preferences, requests and offers

Decide whether the desired element is a thing or an action. Use would like + noun for the thing and would like to + base verb for the action.

META DE LA LECCIÓN

Use would like naturally for preferences, requests and offers in everyday A1 situations.

MODELO

I would like a coffee. / I would like to order lunch. / Would you like some water?

Al terminar podrás

1. Request a thing politely
2. Express a desired action
3. Make and answer offers
4. Contrast would like with habitual like

01 · COMPRENDER

La idea esencial

Would like expresses a present preference or a polite intention without using the ordinary habit meaning of like. The lesson covers would like + noun, would like to + verb, questions, offers and short service exchanges.

Build the central contrast

The lesson is organised around a small set of choices that produce different meanings. Start from meaning, then locate the grammatical slot that carries that meaning. This keeps the sentence understandable and avoids a word-for-word transfer from Spanish.

Compare the complete examples rather than memorising an isolated word. The surrounding subject, verb, noun type and communicative purpose explain why the selected form is appropriate.

Context	Model	Control
Thing	I would like a coffee, please.	A desired thing follows would like directly.
Action	I would like to reserve a table.	An action uses to + base verb.
Offer	Would you like some water?	Would moves before the subject.

Read the sentence purpose

A statement, question, negative, offer or answer can activate a different form. Start from meaning, then locate the grammatical slot that carries that meaning. This keeps the sentence understandable and avoids a word-for-word transfer from Spanish.

Compare the complete examples rather than memorising an isolated word. The surrounding subject, verb, noun type and communicative purpose explain why the selected form is appropriate.

Context	Model	Control
Plural subject	We would like to order now.	Would does not change with the subject.
Negative preference	I would not like to sit outside.	Not follows would.
Question action	Would she like to join us?	To takes the base verb.

Control agreement and noun form

The selected structure must still agree with its subject or noun. Start from meaning, then locate the grammatical slot that carries that meaning. This keeps the sentence understandable and avoids a word-for-word transfer from Spanish.

Compare the complete examples rather than memorising an isolated word. The surrounding subject, verb, noun type and communicative purpose explain why the selected form is appropriate.

Context	Model	Control
Habit contrast	I like coffee every day.	Ordinary like describes a general preference.
Now contrast	I would like a coffee now.	Would like fits a current polite request.
Short reply	Would you like tea? Yes, please.	Yes, please is a natural acceptance.

Use the pattern in real interaction

Short exchanges reveal whether the structure sounds complete and purposeful. Start from meaning, then locate the grammatical slot that carries that meaning. This keeps the sentence understandable and avoids a word-for-word transfer from Spanish.

Compare the complete examples rather than memorising an isolated word. The surrounding subject, verb, noun type and communicative purpose explain why the selected form is appropriate.

Context	Model	Control
Decline	Would you like dessert? No, thank you.	No, thank you declines politely.
Service request	I would like the menu, please.	The phrase makes a polite request.
Contraction	I'd like to pay by card.	I'd means I would here.

Compare nearby forms

Similar-looking alternatives are not interchangeable when polarity, logic or position changes. Start from meaning, then locate the grammatical slot that carries that meaning. This keeps the sentence understandable and avoids a word-for-word transfer from Spanish.

Compare the complete examples rather than memorising an isolated word. The surrounding subject, verb, noun type and communicative purpose explain why the selected form is appropriate.

Context	Model	Control
Action	I would like to reserve a table.	An action uses to + base verb.
Offer	Would you like some water?	Would moves before the subject.
Plural subject	We would like to order now.	Would does not change with the subject.

Repair the Spanish transfer

The English frame may encode the same idea with a different operator, determiner or word order. Start from meaning, then locate the grammatical slot that carries that meaning. This keeps the sentence understandable and avoids a word-for-word transfer from Spanish.

Compare the complete examples rather than memorising an isolated word. The surrounding subject, verb, noun type and communicative purpose explain why the selected form is appropriate.

Context	Model	Control
Negative preference	I would not like to sit outside.	Not follows would.
Question action	Would she like to join us?	To takes the base verb.
Habit contrast	I like coffee every day.	Ordinary like describes a general preference.

Connect two decisions

A natural sentence often combines form, meaning and reference rather than testing one blank in isolation. Start from meaning, then locate the grammatical slot that carries that meaning. This keeps the sentence understandable and avoids a word-for-word transfer from Spanish.

Compare the complete examples rather than memorising an isolated word. The surrounding subject, verb, noun type and communicative purpose explain why the selected form is appropriate.

Context	Model	Control
Now contrast	I would like a coffee now.	Would like fits a current polite request.
Short reply	Would you like tea? Yes, please.	Yes, please is a natural acceptance.

Context	Model	Control
Decline	Would you like dessert? No, thank you.	No, thank you declines politely.

Run the final audit

Before approving the sentence, reconstruct the intended meaning and check every visible dependency. Start from meaning, then locate the grammatical slot that carries that meaning. This keeps the sentence understandable and avoids a word-for-word transfer from Spanish.

Compare the complete examples rather than memorising an isolated word. The surrounding subject, verb, noun type and communicative purpose explain why the selected form is appropriate.

Context	Model	Control

Action	I would like to reserve a table.	An action uses to + base verb.
Offer	Would you like some water?	Would moves before the subject.

From controlled form to real A1 communication

A learner controls Would like only when the form survives outside a single model sentence. Begin with the central contrast, rebuild it with a new subject and new vocabulary, and then place it inside a short exchange. The structure should remain accurate while the communicative details change.

Use a three-part review. First, name the intended meaning. Second, point to the word or position that carries that meaning. Third, read the whole sentence and check whether reference, agreement and register still fit the situation. This review turns a correct answer into a reusable A1 skill.

Do not judge the target form in isolation. Read the words immediately before and after it, identify the subject and the finite verb, and reconstruct the positive or neutral sentence when useful. This local context often explains an ending, an auxiliary, a determiner or a position that would otherwise seem arbitrary.

For independent study, complete one short stage at a time and record the reason for every correction. A useful note has three parts: the form you wrote, the form the sentence requires and the decision that separates them. Revisit that decision with a new example within twenty-four hours, then read both examples aloud and compare their rhythm with confidence.

Stage	Action	Success evidence
Recognise	identify the target decision	explains the meaning
Rebuild	change subject or vocabulary	keeps the pattern
Use	place it in a mini-dialogue	sounds complete
Review	correct and explain	names the controlling rule
