WELEARN · TRANSCRIPCIÓN

Transcripción de audio

Cambridge B2 First (FCE) · Set 2

01 Comprensión auditiva - Parte 1: Opción múltiple (fragmentos cortos)

You will hear people talking in eight different situations. For questions one to eight, choose the best answer A, B or C. 1. You hear two students talking about their first geography class of the year. Did you enjoy today's geography class about Canada? It really made me want to go there. It's a great place. I've been a few times. Really? Wow! Well, I certainly discovered loads of useful stuff I wasn't aware of before. I was struggling to keep up sometimes though. Doing some background reading will help, I think. Well, even though I've been there, I can't say I knew that much. What we did should really help with our next assignment. I wonder if we'll get to find out about the animals in Canada. They're really interesting. That'd be great, but I've no idea if geography includes those. Hmm, maybe not.

Did you enjoy today's geography class about Canada? It really made me want to go there. It's a great place. I've been a few times. But I've no idea if geography includes those. Hmm, maybe not. Two. You hear a boy telling a friend about buying some food for wild birds.

Where are you off to with that bag of birdseed, Jake? I'm going to put some in the garden and then wait till the birds come. I fed them every morning this winter. I've had an amazing number come and feed so far and recently one really unusual-colored bird's been visiting. It might come back again. Really? Yeah. Anyway, it's all for a conservation organisation I'm involved with. There's been such a decline in some species. They've asked people to identify the birds they see over a certain period. Sounds brilliant. Can I take part too? Sure. You can help me if there's one I don't recognise. I've been a few times. I've been a few times. I've been a few times. I've been a few times. I've been a few times. I've been a few times. I've been a few times. I've been a few times. I've been a few times. I've been a few times.

I've been a few times. I've been a few times. I've been a few times. I've been a few times. I've been a few times. There's been such a decline in some species. They've asked people to identify the birds they see over a certain period. Sounds brilliant. Can I take part too? Sure. You can help me if there's one I don't recognise. Three. You hear a girl telling a friend about a spelling competition she won. Congratulations on winning the national spelling test, Hailey. Thanks. I thought it would be scary as the other students were brilliant, but I refused to be put off by them. Great. Loads of the words were really difficult, though. How on earth did you learn to spell them all? Well, I just got used to remembering them. My dad taught me different strategies, like using rhymes and words.

Actually, just seeing the words constantly was what did it. It really helped get them into my head. I had lots of them all stuck on the walls in my room. I always remember stuff that way. Wow. Wish that worked for me. Congratulations on winning the national spelling test. I'm so glad you're here. Congratulations on winning the national spelling test, Hailey. Thanks. I thought it would be scary as the other students were brilliant, but I refused to be put off by them. Great. Loads of the words were really difficult, though. How on earth did you learn to spell them all? Well, I just got used to remembering them. My dad taught me different strategies, like using rhymes to remember unusual spellings. Actually, just seeing the words constantly was what did it. It really helped get them into my head.

I had lots of them all stuck on the walls in my room. I always remember stuff that way. Wow. Wish that worked for me. Four. You hear a technology teacher telling her students about the model cars. They are going to make. Right. Let's get started. Right. I'm so glad you're here. Right. Last term, we made some great model cars from ready-made kits, didn't we? This term, you've got a new challenge. Building a model car using parts you've made yourself. Now, we've got pretty much all the tools you'll require here in school, but if you need anything else, I'll see what I can do. The key to this project is that you are precise about the component parts you make. If you are careless, the car probably won't work. But first, look online for the kind of car you'd like to build.

Even if it's something quite advanced, you can get help to simplify it. Right. Let's get started. Five. You hear a boy talking to his sister about a sweatshirt he bought recently. Ben, could I borrow your new sweatshirt? I'm going skateboarding, and it's really cold. Sure. In fact, you can keep it if you want. What? But it was really expensive. And I love the bright red. It's not a color you usually buy, is it? But it looks good on you. Hmm, maybe you're right. To be honest, though, I've been tempted to return it to the shop. It's quite thin, considering how much they charged for it. You might feel quite chilly in it today. It's what everyone's wearing, though. Not like you to be so fashionable. Well, thanks. I'll take that as a compliment. I'll take that as a compliment. Six.

You hear a school football coach talking to his team about avoiding injuries. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment.

I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment.

I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. I'm going to take that as a compliment. That'll really help. I know you're all aware of the importance of keeping hydrated, keeping up fluid levels, so I won't go on about that.

And those warm-up exercises we've always done for your muscles will be just as important this year, so don't go treating those as a waste of time. I'm not sure that place would be for me. Well, like you, I'm not really into old houses and paintings and all that stuff, so I just skipped those. I'm not sure that place would be for me. I'm not sure that place would be for me. I'm not sure that place would be for me. I'm not sure that place would be for me. I'm not sure that place would be for me. I'm not sure that place would be for me. I'm not sure that place would be for me. I'm not sure that place would be for me. I'm not sure that place would be for me. I'm not sure that place would be for me. I'm not sure that place would be for me. I'm not sure that place would be for me.

I'm not sure that place would be for me. I'm not sure that place would be for me. I'm not sure that place would be for me. I'm not sure that place would be for me. I'm not sure that place would be for me. I'm not sure that place would be for me. I'm not sure that place would be for me. I'm not sure that place would be for me. I'm not sure that place would be for me. I'm not sure that place would be for me. I'm not sure that place would be for me. I'm not sure that place would be for me. I'm not sure that place would be for me. I'm not sure that place would be for me. I'm not sure that place would be for me. I believe you were the only person there. I reckon there'd be enough stuff there to keep you interested. I mean, I even got really into the exhibition of vintage cars they've got there. And they're not normally my thing at all. Well, we'll see. Maybe I'll go. 8. You hear a boy leaving a phone message for a friend about a family camping holiday. Hi Jack, we're back from our family camping trip. As you know, we spent weeks beforehand getting ready. Mum and Dad packed so much stuff. Anyway, by the time we arrived at the coast, bad weather had already started to come. It could have wrecked the whole trip, but our tent was really dry, so we just got on with it and decided not to let it spoil things. It was a beautiful place, overlooking the sea. You'd love it. Whether we'd be tempted to go again though, I'm not entirely sure. Anyway, see you next week. 9. We're back from our family camping trip. We've been camping for a while, but we've been out of the city. We've been out of the city for a while, but we've been out of the city for a while. We've been out of the city for a while, but we've been out of the city for a while.

We've been out of the city for a while, but we've been out of the city for a while. We've been out of the city for a while, but we've been out of the city for a while. We've been out of the city for a while, but we've been out of the city for a while. So we just got on with it and decided not to let it spoil things. It was a beautiful place, overlooking the sea. You'd love it. Whether we'd be tempted to go again though, I'm not entirely sure. Anyway, see you next week. That's the end of part one.

02 Comprensión auditiva - Parte 2: Completar oraciones

You will hear a girl called Anna giving a presentation about the fashion blog that she's created. For questions 9 to 18, complete the sentences with a word or short phrase. You now have 45 seconds to look at part 2. Hi, I'm Anna and I'm a fashion blogger. I've always loved fashion and creative writing, so a fashion blog combines both interests. My blog's about clothes for teenagers, which my brother and I model. When I first started, I didn't get many hits, but I did get mentioned in a well-known magazine, so I was pleased. Then one newspaper wrote something about me and loads more people started to look at the blog. After that, a local TV channel came and interviewed me for a programme. That was great! Since then, the blog has really started to develop, so I'm no longer working alone.

I recently met a photographer at my college, who agreed to take some shots for the site in return for publicity. And I considered asking a hairdresser to help, but I can't afford to pay anyone yet. I'd like to hire a makeup artist too, one day, but we'll see. There are some beautiful clothes available for teenagers now, so I feature those in my blog, while bearing in mind what my reader's lifestyles may be like. They're probably all students, so that's really the deciding factor when thinking about what to include. But they all have different tastes, so I make sure I feature clothes to suit a range of tastes. I try and think about their budgets too, of course, so choosing clothes is quite a task. Having said that, I've discovered teenagers are prepared to pay more for certain things if they're good quality.

I asked readers about their most expensive purchases, expecting they'd say trainers, which can cost a fortune. However, jeans seem to be their biggest purchase in terms of how much cash they'd part with. That didn't surprise me, because well-fitting ones aren't cheap. As for other essential items like jackets, their parents seem to be the ones to buy those. Most of the clothes I talk about are readily available, so you can go into department stores and find them there, and local clothes shops will stock them too. To mix things up, though, I also feature clothes I found in second-hand shops. They're my personal favourites. I shop in them a lot. You can find really original things. Markets are quite good for that too. As well as showing the latest styles, I also include vintage clothes from other periods.

Believe it or not, the 1920s is the richest source of ideas for my most recent blog posts, although other periods I featured have been interesting too. People enjoyed the clothes from the 1970s that I showed last year. I got lots of positive comments about stuff from the 1980s too. Because I'm trying to show clothes for both sexes on my blog, I include a range of colours and patterns in the items I choose. Clothes that have no pattern on them are always popular, but people also like checks, especially in bright colours. A little while ago there were suddenly far more hits on anything that had stripes. Anyway, clothes with flowers on them are my personal choice, so they'll always appear somewhere. I try to avoid materials that are artificial if I can.

I focus largely on items made from cotton, say, which I like better than anything made from plastic. And you don't have to spend a lot on them. Walls sometimes features too, especially in winter. I've also begun experimenting with putting things on the blog that I've made myself. I attempted a few hats, although people didn't seem to like them that much. But the bags I made got a better response. Then I started putting together earrings. And when those appeared, people asked to buy them, so that's something for the future. I'm proud of how the blog's grown. I think even at the beginning it was fairly sophisticated, and recently some readers commented that it looked professional, which I took as a compliment.

I didn't start out feeling skilled at it, so it shows what you can achieve once you become more experienced. Now you will hear part two again. Hi, I'm Anna, and I'm a fashion blogger. I've always loved fashion and creative writing, so a fashion blog combines both interests. My blog's about clothes for teenagers, which my brother and I model. When I first started, I didn't get many hits, but I did get mentioned in a well-known magazine, so I was pleased. Then one newspaper wrote something about me, and loads more people started to look at the blog. After that, a local TV channel came and interviewed me for a programme. That was great. Since then, the blog has really started to develop, so I'm no longer working alone.

I recently met a photographer at my college, who agreed to take some shots for the site in return for publicity. And I considered asking a hairdresser to help, but I can't afford to pay anyone yet. I'd like to hire a makeup artist too, one day, but we'll see. There are some beautiful clothes available for teenagers now, so I feature those in my blog, while bearing in mind what my readers' lifestyles may be like. They're probably all students, so that's really the deciding factor when thinking about what to include. But they all have different tastes, so I make sure I feature clothes to suit a range of tastes. I try and think about their budgets too, of course, so choosing clothes is quite a task. Having said that, I've discovered teenagers are prepared to pay more for certain things if they're good quality.

I asked readers about their most expensive purchases, expecting they'd say trainers, which can cost a fortune. However, jeans seem to be their biggest purchase in terms of how much cash they'd part with. That didn't surprise me, because well-fitting ones aren't cheap. As for other essential items like jackets, their parents seem to be the ones to buy those. Most of the clothes I talk about are readily available, so you can go into department stores and find them there, and local clothes shops will stock them too. To mix things up, though, I also feature clothes I found in secondhand shops. They're my personal favourites. I shop in them a lot. You can find really original things. Markets are quite good for that too. As well as showing the latest styles, I also include vintage clothes from other periods.

Believe it or not, the 1920s is the richest source of ideas for my most recent blog posts, although other periods I featured have been interesting too. People enjoyed the clothes from the 1970s that I showed last year. I got lots of positive comments about stuff from the 1980s too. Because I'm trying to show clothes for both sexes on my blog, I include a range of colours and patterns in the items I choose. Clothes that have no pattern on them are always popular, but people also like checks, especially in bright colours. A little while ago there were suddenly far more hits on anything that had stripes. Anyway, clothes with flowers on them are my personal choice, so they'll always appear somewhere. I try to avoid materials that are artificial if I can.

I focus largely on items made from cotton, say, which I like better than anything made from plastic. And you don't have to spend a lot on them. Walls sometimes features too, especially in winter. I've also begun experimenting with putting things on the blog that I've made myself. I attempted a few hats, although people didn't seem to like them that much. But the bags I made got a better response. Then I started putting together earrings. And when those appeared, people asked to buy them, so that's something for the future. I'm proud of how the blog's grown. I think even at the beginning it was fairly sophisticated, and recently some readers commented that it looked professional, which I took as a compliment.

I didn't start out feeling skilled at it, so it shows what you can achieve once you become more experienced. That's the end of Part 2.

03 Comprensión auditiva - Parte 3: Emparejamiento múltiple

You will hear five short extracts in which teenagers are talking about finding a valuable object by chance. For questions 19 to 23, choose from the list A to H, what each speaker says about the experience. Use the letters only once. There are three extra letters which you do not need to use. You now have 30 seconds to look at part three. You will hear five short extracts in which teenagers are talking about finding a valuable object by chance. Use the letters only once. There are three extra letters which you do not need to use. Speaker one My family owns a 300 year old farm and we're always finding ancient things in the soil like bits of pottery. It's great for me because I'm interested in archaeology. Then one day I discovered a valuable gold ring. I was thrilled and imagined showing it to my friends.

I must admit I wanted to hang on to it because I knew we'd never find the owner. But then I felt guilty so I told Dad he took it to the museum where the staff put it on display with an alarm to stop it going missing. So it wasn't quite the ending I'd hoped for but I guess visitors to the museum can see it now. Speaker two Speaker two I love music but knew my parents couldn't afford to buy a piano. Anyway the school had an old one left by its owners when they went abroad so I'd practice on that all the time imagining I was playing a very expensive modern one. One day I happened to look inside the piano to see how it worked and discovered a bag tucked into one corner with lots of old coins inside it.

I never imagined they'd be anything special but the city museum said they were really valuable and the school got some money as a reward. So my dream came true as we got a brand new school piano to play. Speaker three My whole family was checking in for a flight to Canada when I noticed another passenger had left a tablet by the desk similar to one I was hoping to buy. The check-in staff said they tried to find the owner in the hope of returning it before the flight left. Anyway back at school again I mentioned what had happened to my IT teacher who soon came up with an idea for a phone app that would help people to locate their device if they lost it on a journey. So with his support our class worked on a design. I hope it's now being used by the owner of that tablet.

Speaker four There are always loads of people flying kites on the beach near my house. One day mum noticed an expensive looking kite flying across the beach with no one holding the string. Then the wind suddenly dropped so when the kite landed I went over and picked it up. It was beautiful and I wanted to fly it. I love kites. But then we spotted where it had come from. A bit further away a young guy was running up and down the beach looking worried. That kite was obviously precious to him. Anyway he offered me some money as a reward but mum thanked him politely and said it wasn't necessary sadly. Speaker five I like browsing through secondhand bookshops. It's amazing what people leave inside books. Letters, foreign banknotes, you name it. Anyway a recent find has probably become the most valuable to me.

A very old photo of the house we live in now showing the family that lived there at the time. My dad agreed there was virtually no way of finding the original owner so I just kept the photo not really knowing what to do with it. Since then I found myself searching antique shops for similar old photos and I've got quite a collection now. I don't think any of them are worth much money but that doesn't matter. Speaker six Now you will hear part three again. Speaker one My family owns a 300 year old farm and we're always finding ancient things in the soil like bits of pottery. It's great for me because I'm interested in archaeology. Then one day I discovered a valuable gold ring. I was thrilled and imagined showing it to my friends.

I must admit I wanted to hang on to it because I knew we'd never find the owner but then I felt guilty so I told dad he took it to the museum where the staff put it on display with an alarm to stop it going missing. So it wasn't quite the ending I'd hoped for but I guess visitors to the museum can see it now. Speaker two I love music but knew my parents couldn't afford to buy a piano. Anyway the school had an old one left by its owners when they went abroad so I'd practice on that all the time imagining I was playing a very expensive modern one. One day I happened to look inside the piano to see how it worked and discovered a bag tucked into one corner with lots of old coins inside it.

I never imagined they'd be anything special but the city museum said they were really valuable and the school got some money as a reward. So my dream came true as we got a brand new school piano to play. Speaker three My whole family was checking in for a flight to Canada when I noticed another passenger had left a tablet by the desk similar to one I was hoping to buy. The check-in staff said they tried to find the owner in the hope of returning it before the flight left. Anyway back at school again I mentioned what had happened to my IT teacher who soon came up with an idea for a phone app that would help people to locate their device if they lost it on a journey. So with his support our class worked on a design. I hope it's now being used by the owner of that tablet.

Speaker four There are always loads of people flying kites on the beach near my house. One day mum noticed an expensive looking kite flying across the beach with no one holding the string. Then the wind suddenly dropped so when the kite landed I went over and picked it up. It was beautiful and I wanted to fly it. I love kites. But then we spotted where it had come from. A bit further away a young guy was running up and down the beach looking worried. That kite was obviously precious to him. Anyway he offered me some money as a reward but mum thanked him politely and said it wasn't necessary sadly. Speaker five I like browsing through secondhand bookshops. It's amazing what people leave inside books. Letters, foreign banknotes, you name it. Anyway a recent find has probably become the most valuable to me.

A very old photo of the house we live in now showing the family that lived there at the time. My dad agreed there was virtually no way of finding the original owner. So I just kept the photo not really knowing what to do with it. Since then I found myself searching antique shops for similar old photos and I've got quite a collection now. I don't think any of them are worth much money but that doesn't matter. Speaker six That's the end of part three.

04 Comprensión auditiva - Parte 4: Opción múltiple (fragmento largo)

You will hear an interview with a student called John Benton, who's just completed a 25km running race. For questions 24 to 30, choose the best answer A, B or C. You now have one minute to look at part 4. You will hear an interview with a student called John Benton, who's just completed a 25km running race. You now have one minute to look at part 4. You now have one minute to look at part 4. You now have one minute to look at part 4. Today I'm with John Benton, who's just taken part in a 25km running race. John, you'd never run that distance before. What made you decide to enter the race? Well, a few famous people had recently taken up running, one in particular ran twice the distance I did. That really impressed me, but what finally made me get my running shoes out was my mate's attitude.

They reckoned I was far too lazy to complete any race at all, so I was determined to show them I could do it. Anyway, my dad's a keen runner, and once I decided to enter, he came along during my training runs as my running buddy, which was great. So how much training did you do beforehand? Well, I was pretty organised. First of all, I drew up a 12-week training plan and built in goals I thought would be manageable. Dad wondered if I was being overambitious time-wise, because I hadn't run for a while, but then I do play football, so I knew I was in reasonable shape. I was told I shouldn't push myself too hard without resting and recovering between training sessions, but I admit I didn't really listen to that advice. I imagine the training was tough. Were there any problems?

Well, of course there were school mornings when the alarm went off really early and it was freezing outside, but I'd still look forward to getting myself out there. Getting back home again in time for the school bus caused problems though, and when I got home from school, after 4pm, it was really too dark to run, but I still went. Anyway, at least after my training, I could still play computer games on the sofa as usual. And did you follow a special diet? Well, some runners do things like eat high protein, high carbohydrate diets, but I just tried to eat what I usually do, pretty healthily, apart from chocolate and chips, which I cut out, and I didn't miss them. Then about a week before the race, I started eating more carbohydrates, like pizza and pasta, to build up my energy levels.

That worked fine, especially on the day of the race itself. I knew how to start all that well before the race though, it's too late to experiment on the day. And what was the day of the race like? Pretty exciting. There were loads of people there when we arrived, and even complete strangers were wishing me luck. Anyway, once we'd all set off, everyone was cheering us along the route and calling out the names of their friends. I actually spotted my mates holding up a sign with my name on. That really made me determined to finish the race. So, did you have any strategies to help you keep going? I had a finishing time in mind that I was aiming for, but once I'd started, the aim just became, keep going and cross the finish line. Since I'd never done a race like that before, I didn't have a personal best to beat.

I'd been told too that starting too fast is a mistake, that I should just relax and enjoy it, then speed up before the end, which did work. It's blocking out the voice in your head, telling you that you can't do it that's hardest. But I'd learnt to manage that by dealing with the race in stages, and remembering by training. So, how did you feel when you finally crossed the line? Well, I assumed my first thought would be that I'd never attempt anything so tough again. But I had such a feeling of achievement that I'd finished, and my dad looked so proud, waiting there with my friends. Although I was so exhausted, I barely registered it. But we did celebrate later, and I've already signed up for my next run. I'm sure. Congratulations, John. Today I'm with John Benton, who's just taken part in a 25km running race. John, you'd never run that distance before. What made you decide to enter the race? Well, a few famous people had recently taken up running, one in particular ran twice the distance I did. That really impressed me, but what finally made me get my running shoes out was my mate's attitude. They reckoned I was far too lazy to complete any race at all, so I was determined to show them I could do it. Anyway, my dad's a keen runner, and once I decided to enter, he came along during my training runs as my running buddy, which was great. So, how much training did you do beforehand? Well, I was pretty organised. First of all, I drew up a 12-week training plan, and built in goals to help me finish the race.

First of all, I drew up a 12-week training plan, and built in goals I thought would be manageable. Dad wondered if I was being overambitious time-wise, because I hadn't run for a while, but then I do play football, so I knew I was in reasonable shape. I was told I shouldn't push myself too hard without resting and recovering between training sessions, but I admit I didn't really listen to that advice. I imagine the training was tough. Were there any problems? Well, of course there were school mornings when the alarm went off really early, and it was freezing outside, but I'd still look forward to getting myself out there. Getting back home again in time for the school bus caused problems, though, and when I got home from school, after 4pm, it was really too dark to run, but I still went.

Anyway, at least after my training, I could still play computer games on the sofa as usual. And did you follow a special diet? Well, some runners do things like eat high protein, high carbohydrate diets, but I just tried to eat what I usually do, pretty healthily, apart from chocolates and chips, which I cut out, and I didn't miss them. Then about a week before the race, I started eating more carbohydrates, like pizza and pasta, to build up my energy levels. That worked fine, especially on the day of the race itself. I knew how to start all that well before the race, though. It's too late to experiment on the day. And what was the day of the race like? Pretty exciting. There were loads of people there when we arrived, and even complete strangers were wishing me luck.

Anyway, once we'd all set off, everyone was cheering us along the route and calling out the names of their friends. I actually spotted my mates holding up a sign with my name on. That really made me determined to finish the race. So, did you have any strategies to help you keep going? I had a finishing time in mind that I was aiming for, but once I'd started, the aim just became, keep going and cross the finish line. Since I'd never done a race like that before, I didn't have a personal best to beat. I'd been told too that starting too fast is a mistake, that I should just relax and enjoy it, then speed up before the end, which did work. It's blocking out the voice in your head, telling you that you can't do it that's hardest.

But I'd learnt to manage that by dealing with the race in stages, and remembering my training. So, how did you feel when you finally crossed the line? Well, I assumed my first thought would be that I'd never attempt anything so tough again. But I had such a feeling of achievement that I'd finished, and my dad looked so proud, waiting there with my friends. Although I was so exhausted, I barely registered it. But we did celebrate later, and I've already signed up for my next run. I'm sure. Congratulations, John. That's the end of Part 4.